Orthodox parties and directors of Mirashi schools, to organize parents for registration of their children in religious state schools rather than in secular ones. "Haaretz" (Against Yisrael) says that the party should temporarily abandon all other activities in favour of the establishment of its independent school set outside state education.

"Davar" (Histadrut) welcomed Mapai's decision in favour of an affiliation of the Histadrut with the International Federation of Free Trade Unions, which includes many unions, with which the Histadrut maintains friendly and fraternal relations, such as the A.P.L. and the C.I.O. in the United States. When the Histadrut left the Communist-dominated World Confederation of Trade Unions.

"Haboker" (General Zionist) warns of the grave dangers to the peace of the Middle East which are emphasized by the presence of many Nazi advisers in Egypt. Recent declarations of the Egyptian Premier, General Nagib show that he is no longer a free agent, but driven forward by his extremist colleagues. The paper recalls that not only Western statesmen but even certain circles in Israel have been misled about Nagib's real intentions.

A Desecrated Idea "Haaretz" says that the Government has desecrated the original pure idea of "Yad va-Shem," by the Reparations agreement with Germany, and it seems that the planned memorial for the slaughtered Jews will be misused as just one more instrument for money-raising.

"Al Hamishmar" (Mapai) sees in the State Education Bill a "liquidation of the values" which have until now been cherished by the Israel Labour Movement, as well as "unconditional surrender" by Mapai to the General Zionists. According to the paper, only the labour trend will be sacrificed to State education, while the Orthodox trend will in practice continue. The paper also speaks out against the proposed abolition of compulsory free education for five year old kindergarten pupils.

"Haaretz" advocates in an article directed against "Davar" (Histadrut), the right of the

THE regret at General Riley's departure from the Middle East is genuine and widespread. Thousands who were never privileged to know him personally, regretted his departure.

General Riley was a man who had the cause of peace at heart. For five years he was the presiding genius, as he had been one of the main architects of the Armistice which governs the relations between Israel and the neighboring states. In Israel there were occasions more frequently perhaps than one cares to recall today, when it was impossible to agree with his rulings or views, but never was his impartiality called into doubt, nor the respect in which he was held diminished.

General Riley possesses a remarkable range of qualities, some of which might appear quite incompatible with one another in a man less experienced or wise. He could show great firmness, and yet be pliable when pliability seemed called for; his sense of fun could never blot out his underlying seriousness of purpose; he was the soldier always, yet could rise to the heights of a statesman. By these qualities, as by his grasp of detail, his industry, his tact and his application to duty, he was able to succeed in a post which was never light and which often faced him with obstacles that must have seemed insurmountable.

Few will deny that he has served well of the Middle East and its people, as well as of the great international organization in whose service he stood. He had before him the example and inspiration of another great servant of the United Nations and of the cause of peace in the Middle East, Dr. Ralph Bunche, who had helped to lay the foundations on which General Riley built, and built so well.

Inevitably the question will be asked, what will happen in the post-Riley era? The departure of Dr. Bunche marked the transition from armed truce to armed armistice, and there are signs today that the time may have come to overhaul some of the armistice machinery. It is well known that the authors of the Armistice Agreements never thought for a moment that they would have to last for as long as they have done, and it is perhaps a tribute to the wisdom of their structure that they have withstood the political storms of four years and more. Yet in daily practice it is evident that cracks have begun to appear here and there. A meeting of the Mixed Armistice Commission is no longer what it was, and what it was intended to be. It was supposed to be a meeting between two equal and interested parties, the U.N., Israel, and the Arab State concerned, with a view to arriving at decisions with the greatest possible degree of unanimity, and really finding a solution to the problem under consideration or preventing the recurrence of the type of incident the meeting had been called to discuss. Now these meetings have degenerated into a confrontation between two opposing parties under the chairmanship of a third whose main role is to decide the issue.

General Riley must be aware of this situation, and he is likely to view it with some alarm as he lays down his office and prepares to hand over to his successor. One may guess that he is at this moment composing his political testament in the form of a Final Report to the United Nations. This document may turn out to be more than a summary of the past or guidance for the future; it may make possible a re-evaluation of inter-State relations in the Middle East. This will in large measure depend on the frame of mind of the Arab leaders, who may not all be so narrow in their outlook as the rumormongers of their leaders might lead one to assume.

General Riley, on tour at present of the Arab capitals, takes with him the gratitude and good wishes of all who have the interests of the Middle East genuinely at heart — and they will combine them with the hope that his service and experience will not be lost to this part of the world. His place as head of the Truce Supervision Organization will be difficult to fill, but not as difficult as it would have been if his successor had to take over from a lesser man.

THE WORKING WEEK

Extending the Israel Bond Issue

THE Minister of Finance, Mr. E. Eshkol, has left for his first visit to the United States since he took over the Treasury. The main item on his agenda is not however to talk with representatives of the American Government, but with the leaders of the Independence Bond Drive and other Jewish leaders.

Although there will be a good deal to discuss with Mr. Eshkol, the most important issue will not be the strained relations between the Bond Drive and the United Jewish Appeal, which have receded into the background during the last 12 months, but the bonds themselves; both the bonds that have been sold and those that have not.

When the Bond Drive was launched in May 1951, the target was to collect $500m. during three years for investment in Israel development. Another $500m. should have come from other sources, both public and private, and Mr. Ben Gurion pledged that Israel would invest $1,000m. over the same period.

It now appears that the "other sources" came closest to reaching their target. During two years less one month (i.e. May 1951 to March 1953, the latest figures available) the Bond Drive provided the Treasury with $100m. in cash and pledged another $43m. In terms of cash the Bond Drive has collected only 34 per cent of the expected total over the period, and adding the pledges which have not yet been paid in, the percentage is 65.5—still less than half of that should have been received.

Furthermore, this year's income from the Bond Drive is 20 per cent below the conservative estimates of the Foreign Currency Budget. In the 1952/53 Budget, Bond income should add up to $48m., but in the first nine months (July to March) only $50 per cent of the proportional estimate of $38.5m. were received.

One of the Tel Aviv dailies reported statements attributed to Mr. Eshkol about the failure of the Bond Drive earlier this week. According to the report Mr. Eshkol suggested that Israel's economic situation and its fluctuations had limited Bond sales, while the intervention of the U.I.A. prevented the Bond Drive from expanding in the larger South American countries. A Government spokesman in Jerusalem declared that except for the Press report already published, no official information about Mr. Eshkol's statement was available. He also indicated that this was another matter Mr. Eshkol would look into on his visit.

Immigration Factor
When the Bond Drive was launched two years ago, many doubted whether the $500m. target could be reached in the allotted time. What was the phenomenal rate of immigration, an atmosphere of distrust of normal standards developed among the economists.

It was officially indicated however, that when Mr. Eshkol meets Mr. Eshkol, it will not be to cry over spilt milk but for a constructive discussion of what to do after May 1954, the end of the period originally scheduled for the Drive. The problem is twofold: what to do about the bonds that have been sold, and where the money to make up the original sum is to come from if the Drive is not extended.

There is apparently no definite news that the Bond Drive will be closed in a year's time and it has been suggested that the Israel Government might ask the permission of the U.S. Government to prolong it. Even if permission is granted, the question of what to do on May 1, 1954, will still remain. According to the terms of the Bond issue, the shares are not transferable until that date. After that, the present bonds may be exchanged for fully transferable bearer bonds which may be freely offered on the Stock Exchange.

This arrangement was made so that bonds thus offered should not compete with bonds offered by the Drive sponsors during the three initial years. If the Bond Drive is to continue after next year when the bonds become bearer bonds, and are offered for sale, the Drive management will have to take up these bonds at the nominal price for fear of being undercut by official prices.

There have however been a number of suggestions about how to replace the Bond Drive by a different bond issue altogether. One idea is that instead of a general sale of bonds, specific investment schemes should be floated, such as the Tel Aviv Project or the Phosphate Mine Bonds. Another suggestion is that there should be a general holding company to issue the bonds and investing the money obtained in buying shares in individual Israel enterprises.

This last idea has already been translated into fact by a new holding company recently established in Tel Aviv.

Skorzeny, Remer Join Egyptians

By LEO SHIMAN

THE British Government is seriously worried about the fact that two top Nazi war criminals, SS Generals Otto Skorzeny and Otto Remer, have arrived in Egypt having been hired by General Mohammed Nagib to plan and lead his threatened campaign against the British forces in the Suez Canal Zone.

There was more than just a flowery turn of speech to Sir Winston Churchill's recent parliamentary declaration, when he referred to Nazi-led Egyptian commandos. There is also more to the dispatch to Suez of the Third Royal Marine Commando Brigade and the Sixteenth Parachute Brigade, than a mere show of force. This time it is not of the anti-Nazi officers that the British have to deal with; even at a conservative estimate the two SS Generals now employed by Nagib present a bigger threat to the British than two full divisions of commandos.

Skorzeny's SS maintained three special services during the war: the Sonder-Commando (Special Commando), to deal with partisans, guerrillas, resistance fighters and politically unreliable elements; the Sonder-Sturm (Special Task Force), to exterminate Jews and other "inferior races"; and the Sonder-Dienst (Special Service), to handle the assassination of Mr. Churchill in 1945. Fortunately, Germany's surrender prevented him from carrying out the last point of his programme. Skorzeny is considered world's top saboteur and terror expert. He escaped from Germany after the war and lived for more than six years in Mexico before he rejoined the new German intelligence network linking Nazis in Latin America and Spain to Nazis in Germany and the Middle East.

He arrived in Cairo two weeks ago at the personal invitation of General Nagib which he received from the Egyptian Ambassador to Madrid. There Skorzeny took over the leadership of the German Military Mission to Egypt, consisting of 270 top Nazi officers and civilian experts.

Skorzeny's right hand is SS-Major Kurt Hannemann, writing Chief of the German Military Mission to Egypt. Hannemann is the man the British need in Suez, together with other German experts in the field of sabotage, guerrilla warfare, and the use of the Suez Canal.

OTTO SKORZENY

Otto Remer was a major in command of a battalion in Berlin in the Summer of 1944, when German patriots staged their anti-Nazi putsch of July 20, 1944. Remer, who was supposed to help the conspirators shoot them out, and after betraying them, rounded them up to be tortured and murdered. For this he was rewarded by Hitler with an on-the-spot promotion to Major-General and was put in command of a crack SS Division. After the war, Remer became the leader of the Neo-Nazi movement in Germany. This individual British called him "The Little Fisherman," but his rabble-rousing was not his only achievement.

Korean Double Talk

By RAY FALK

PANMUNJOM (NANA) AFTER months of weary negotiations, American officers conducting the truce talks here are beginning to learn a few things about the thought processes of Oriental Communists.

The Communist negotiators automatically reject the first suggestion advanced by Western negotiators. When a proposal is finally accepted by the Communists, there is insistence on making changes in the original suggestion. Frequently these changes are no more than changes of words, but they are insisted upon.

One Colonel who has been coming here for months has this interesting bit of advice on how to negotiate with Communists: "Offer them a plan and they will accept it, in the long run, with some change. But ask them for their suggestions and you'll end up in endless arguments."

The English being spoken at these conferences would strike an outsider as slightly ridiculous. The United Nations Command suggested that the exchange of prisoners be handled by a committee. To which Col. Young of the North Korean army replied, "We will study the suggestion and submit it to our superiors for their consideration."

When the time came to deliver the prisoners, the Communists suggested that the exchange be handled by a committee. To which Col. Young of the North Korean army replied, "We will study the suggestion and submit it to our superiors for their consideration."

The U.N. suggested that it deliver two groups of 25 Communist prisoners of war each on the following hours: 09.00, 09.10, 09.20, 09.30, 09.40, 09.50, 10.00, 10.10, 10.20, 10.30, 10.40, 10.50, 11.00, Bringing Up Baby—Correctly

FOR the first time in 30 years I find that a beautiful flower is so far always growing singly on Mt. Carmel has this spring formed quite compact colonies—miniature glades and forests, in fact.

It is the acanthus (or bear's breech), a tall spike with labiate flowers clustered thickly round it, slightly thorny, claret-colored and pale yellow. The fame of the acanthus does not stem from the flower, however, but from the leaf, which is deeply serrated and lobed, much like a thistle's.

One variety of the plant forms a curly rosette at the base of the stem, almost like the head of a column — and this formation gave the idea of the Corinthian capital to the Greek architect Kallimachos who actually used the shape in stylized form for his pillars. As an ornament for friezes, candelabra, and the like, the simple acanthus leaf was also widely used both in classic and Gothic architecture. Strangely enough, though the Greek name of the plant is
